

MRS. JOHN GRUSZKA

Wedding Vows Recited In Cohocton Church Rite

Lynne White and John Gruszka were united in marriage Thursday, Dec. 31, 1987, at St. Pius Catholic Church of Cohocton.

The Rev. Ron Harley officiated at the double-ring ceremony for the daughter of Mrs. James Vanderhoff of Hornell and Ralph White of Cohocton and the son of Lorraine Gruszka of Cheektowaga.

White Christmas trees, candles, a candelabra and baskets of pink and white carnations, roses and white poinsettias decorated the church for the ceremony by candlelight.

Paula Abraham of Wayland was soloist. Given in marriage by her brother, Ralph White, the bride wore a China satin gown with seed pearls and brilliants. The chapel-length train was deeply edged in lace. The gown featured lace appliques and embroidery on the low-cut bodice which was adorned with seed pearls and brilliants.

The benefits of fabric softeners are well established. They impart softness and/or fluffiness to washable fabrics. They decrease static cling, make fabrics feel smooth, impart a pleasing fragrance, reduce drying time, reduce wrinkling and make ironing easier. When improperly used, however, this laundry aid can stain fabrics. Such stains can generally be removed, and by following some basic procedures the stains can be prevented from recurring.

Fabric softener stains can occur in the washer or dryer. Those from washer added softeners are blue or grey in color, and often look and feel greasy. Stains from dryer added softeners appear as colorless oily spots.

Fortunately, both types are rarely permanent and can be removed by simply wetting the stained area and rubbing with a bar of soap. Rinse the fabric and launder. Check to be sure that the stain is removed and, if not, repeat the procedure before dryer drying. The heat of the dryer may set the stain.

Fabric softener stains are generally caused by the misuse of product. Since products differ, it is important to know the types and how to use each correctly. Liquid products are added to the washer in the deep or final rinse, a few in the wash cycle. Fabric softeners in sheet or packet form are used in a dryer.

To avoid problems, never add a rinse added softener to the wash cycle with a detergent or any laundry additive. Staining occurs because the products react together. A rinse added softener should only be used in the rinse cycle and alone. Pouring undiluted fabric softener directly onto a fabric can cause stains. For best results, softener should be diluted with one cup water, and even diluted, it should never be poured onto a fabric. If a washer has an automatic fabric softener dispenser, do not lift the lid after the wash cycle. If the washer stops after the first spin, staining could occur since the fabric softener will be dispensed improperly.

Overloading a dryer can cause staining because the fabric softener cannot tumble freely. Conversely, too small a load can create greasy stains. Add several bath towels. Stains also can occur when the softener is added after the dryer had started or when too high a heat setting is used for synthetic or permanent press fabrics.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE A FEW MILES CAN MAKE???

Yes, we will be moving to the Avon-Lima area. No, I'm not leaving John Hancock. This was a difficult decision having lived here for over 17 years, but due to increased business demands, I find it necessary to spend more time at our Rochester office. Locating half way between will not only allow me to accomplish this, but will allow me to better serve and service all my friends and clients in the Dansville area. This move should in no way jeopardize our client relationship. When I have the actual address and phone number, I will let you know.

If you have any questions, please call me at 335-3831. Thanks, Ray.
